Thinking of buying a GPS for Christmas?
Then it's here, the 'everything you ever wanted to know about GPS' day

At Cranfield Saturday 22nd November 2008

10.30 am start

GPS or Global Positioning Systems represent the cutting-edge of navigation technology, but also present pilots with new challenges. So, regardless of whether you are an experienced pilot, or new to flying, this training day is designed for all of those who have limited or no experience of using a GPS. We will be looking into how to get the best out of a GPS.

- How does GPS work?
- Do I need a GPS?
- What type of GPS should I have?
- How should I use a GPS?
- How does a GPS relate to conventional navigation techniques?
- Safety factors to be aware of when using a GPS
- Terminology explained and where to find information for use in the GPS

There will be presentations from David Broughton of the Royal Institute of Navigation on the background to GPS, how it works and what to look for in a GPS.

David Cockburn of the CAA will explain how to use GPS for navigation in the cockpit.

AFE of Oxford will discuss impartially the various types of GPS available on the market, from hand sets to cockpit mounted and the features, benefits and drawbacks of all the different versions.

Steve Clark will talk about the forthcoming syllabus for GPS training that is in the progress of being developed by the CAA.

We are also expecting Garmin to be able to bring along some common examples of their machines for you to appraise.

And lastly this will qualify as attendance at a Seminar for the purposes of obtaining an AOPA Wings Award.

So a full day.....as we said everything you've ever wanted to know. If there is anything we've missed please let me know.

Coffee will be available on arrival and a buffet lunch will be provided. It is expected the day will finish about 3.30 pm.

Cost: members £10, guests £15, including coffee and lunch.
